- Allows an employee to make fair share contributions without facing a sudden substantial drain of cash.

Penny Wars

- Each department is given a jar to collect pennies. However, other departments can sabotage your jar by putting silver coins in it. You can retaliate by putting more pennies in your jar and putting silver coins in the other department’s jar. At the end of the designated time period, each department will total the money in their jars. Pennies are added to the total and silver coins (nickels, dimes and quarters) are subtracted from the total. E.G. your jar has 550 pennies, 8 nickels, 10 dimes, and 6 quarters. The total for the jar would be $$5.50 - .40 - 1.00 - 1.50 = \2.60 not $8.40. The department with the largest total wins. All coins are then donated to United Way.

Premier Parking Space Auction

- Have employees bid on a premier parking space. The highest bidder gets to park in the space for a specified period of time, e.g. week, month, year, etc.

HOW TO HANDLE OBJECTIONS

Objections or initial reluctance is a natural part of decision-making. They are also valuable, often revealing misunderstandings people have about United Way. Concealed or silent objections can reinforce the decision not to give or to give nominally in order to conform. Objections acknowledged openly and handled well make individuals more receptive to giving.

Four guiding principles...Remember, objections are not personal.

1. Listen and pay attention to what is being said. Make sure what you heard actually was an objection. For example, “How much do you expect me to give?” might be an objection, or it could simply be a question.
2. Ask Questions to clarify facts and feelings. Try to identify the real issue. This will keep you from making innocent assumptions and assures the person you are listening and interested.
3. Respond. Use the following guidelines to respond to objections:
 - Be attentive. Show understanding and respect the individual’s concerns.
 - Don’t agree with the objection. Your audience won’t hear another word after you say, “Your right.” A more appropriate response would be, “That’s interesting,” or “Tell me why you feel that way.” Then follow up with information that addresses the objection.
 - Don’t argue. Arguing forces people to defend their positions. Remember the old adage about “winning the battle but losing the war?” As a campaign representative, you may win an argument, but lose the contribution.
 - Align your self with the individual. Use sayings like, “I see your point,” “I understand how you feel,” and “I can see why that might be a problem.” Show the person you are truly listening and you care. Having set the problem apart from the two of you, you can work together to resolve it.
 - Answer questions with facts and figures. Don’t respond to objections with theories or beliefs. If you don’t have the information to respond, tell the person you will get back to them. Don’t be afraid to say you don’t know. Get the information from the appropriate source, such as HR, United Way office, etc.
4. Confirm. After answering an objection, check to make sure the individual thinks your answer is reasonable. You might ask: “Does that answer your question (or satisfy your concern)?” If your answer is not confirmed, you may here additional objections. You may need to ask more questions to get clarification.

Prior to asking for a pledge, inquire if the person has all the information he or she may require. If you don’t have an answer, call your United Way representative and then get back to the person who asked the question. When the person’s questions have been answered ask for the pledge. Remember to follow these four principles when answering objections: Listen ~Ask Questions ~ Respond ~ Confirm

Just The FAQ's (Frequently Asked Questions)

How do I know the money I contribute gets to the agencies?

Community volunteers who serve on the board of directors hold United Way accountable for the money it raises. These volunteers allocate money based on agency and community needs, making sure designated funds are distributed according to the contributor's wishes.

Does my gift make a difference?

It makes a difference to those who use the services of the 15 United Way partner agencies.

Why aren't all agencies included in United Way?

Any qualified local health and human service nonprofit can apply for funding of its programs. However, some agencies cannot meet United Way standards, while others follow national policies that require they operate independently. United Way does not directly fund some agencies because their programs closely resemble or duplicate existing programs available to the population being served. Thousands of agencies not directly affiliated with United Way are eligible to receive financial support through United Way from contributors who designate their gift. Therefore, United Way's campaign is open to all qualifying nonprofits that provide health and human service programs.

Who decides how much money each agency will receive?

A group of volunteers decide how much each agency receives. They base their funding decisions on programs, budgets, and funding requests received from the agency, in addition to information obtained during the agency's interview.

Who oversees our local United Way?

Each United Way has its own volunteer board of directors that determines policies, sets procedures, and monitors the activities of the organization.

I feel like I'm pressured to give!

United Way believes giving is a personal decision. Whether or not an individual chooses to contribute and how much to give is entirely up to the individual. No form of forced giving is acceptable. United Way will refund any contribution an individual believes he or she is forced to give. Pressure can be perceived and interpreted differently by many people. Some feel pressured simply by being asked to give. However, because the needs of the community are so great, it is important to ask.

How can I get help through United Way and or its Agencies?

If you or someone you know needs help and you do not know where to go, call the United Way office at (814) 643-3142.

May I direct my gift to a specific nonprofit agency or other United Way?

Yes. United Way enables contributors to direct their money to an area they feel strongly about. This can be a United Way member agency another United Way, or any IRS 501 C 3 organization.

My spouse already gives through his/her employer, why should I give too?

Households in which both spouses are employed are given a unique opportunity to help support their community. Both can show support through their respective employers and greatly impact the provision of programs and services for those in need in the community.

May I give other amounts than those suggested on the pledge card?

Yes. What you give is your decision. The United Way believes giving is a personal decision. Only you know what your personal circumstances are and how much you are able to give.

I'm never going to need United Way services so why should I support them?

You may never use United Way Services; however, one in three persons in our area will use a United Way service during the next year, and many will never know they are doing so. If you aren't currently using a service, you can ensure that the service will still exist if and when you or someone you know may need it.
